

PROFESSIONAL PROFILE

~ Amy Scoby ~

Amy J. Scoby is the Senior Vice President and the first female member of the Board of Directors at The Christman Company. In her role, Amy leads the Copper Connect team, which spans five states and eight offices, focusing on building lasting relationships, strategic partnerships, and ensuring client satisfaction. She also provides corporate leadership in areas such as marketing, business development, strategic planning, government affairs, and internal communications. As a key player in the company's growth, she spearheaded initiatives that resulted in a 330% increase in project awards over a decade, from $465 million in 2013 to over $2 billion today.

Prior to joining Christman in 2012, Amy held an executive position at the Michigan Department of Technology, Management, and Budget, where she led public-private partnerships and service improvement initiatives. She also directed research and public affairs at Michigan State University's Institute for Public Policy and Social Research, and began her career in public service as an aide, caseworker, and campaign manager for a U.S. Congressman.

Amy serves on multiple boards, including the Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce, the Sparrow Foundation, and the Michigan Architectural Foundation, among others. She holds a Bachelor of Arts in Political Theory and Constitutional Democracy and a Master of Public Administration from Michigan State University, where she graduated with honors.
